

Experience at your service...

Throughout my career, I have had the opportunity to support many members facing periods of uncertainty, particularly during reorganizations and budget reductions within the federal public service. As Human Rights Vice-President of the UNE, I have delivered presentations on mental health in the workplace, but more importantly, I have taken the time to listen to the concerns and lived experiences of our members.

These experiences have taught me that behind every issue and every case, there is a person. When members feel heard, respected, and well-informed, it becomes easier to overcome challenges and find solutions.

Since 2014, I have also been a member of my bargaining team in negotiations with the federal government. This experience has allowed me to advocate for members' interests with determination while maintaining a respectful dialogue with the employer. I have learned that the best outcomes are achieved through active listening, thorough preparation, and a commitment to finding balanced solutions.

This is the approach that guides my union involvement: being present, accessible, and responsive to members. I believe in honest communication, collaboration, and solidarity. My goal is to bring people together, build trust, and advance the issues that matter most to you.

I want to be a President who listens, acts, and represents members with integrity. Because our greatest strength lies in our ability to work together respectfully to protect and advance the interests of all members.
